

COLD WAVE HAS PENNSYLVANIA WITHIN ITS GRIP

Fire, Partner of Cold Blasts, Also Brings Suffering To Many

MERCURY MUCH LOWER

All Sections of State Report Thermometer Around Zero

By International News Service
Sweeping out of the Middle West, the first real cold wave of the winter today held all Pennsylvania in its grip. Fire, grim partner of wintry blasts in bringing suffering, took a toll estimated at $1,000,000 in various parts of the State today as the mercury slowly dropped and scores were forced to brave the bitter cold scantily clad.

In many parts of the state it was estimated that the mercury would be near zero by nightfall.

Thermometers in Bristol yesterday morning at seven o'clock registered 58 degrees above zero and this morning at the same hour the temperature was 15 degrees above zero, a drop of 43 degrees in the 24 hours.

PITTSBURGH, Dec. 9 (I.N.S.)—With the official government thermometer registering 9 degrees above zero in Pittsburgh at 8:20 this morning, charity organizations redoubled their efforts to relieve suffering in the first real cold snap of the winter that today enveloped all of this section of the State.

Early reports from outlying districts showed the temperatures were hovering around the same mark as in Pittsburgh, with the cities in the northern part of the state reporting even colder weather.

W. S. Brotzman, U. S. weather forecaster here, predicted the thermometer would go down to zero either during the day or tonight, and promised little relief from the cold weather over the week-end.

In Pittsburgh, hundreds of unemployed were given free lodging in charitable institutions last night. Scores of others sought shelter and a place to sleep in the city's various police stations.

There will be less wind throughout the district today, Brotzman promised, stating that would make the intense cold more endurable.

No deaths have been reported in Pennsylvania, as a result of the cold wave.

NEW YORK, Dec. 9 (I.N.S.)—Although New York City and vicinity escaped the full fury of the seventy-mile gale which swept from the Northwestern States over the Great Lakes to the Eastern seaboard yesterday and early today, Western New York State and the New England seaboard were hard hit. Bitter cold accompanied the gale, and the mercury dropped thirty-five degrees here.

At least a dozen fatalities resulted from the storm. Two deaths were reported from Buffalo, where boats were torn from their moorings, buildings wrecked and scores of persons marooned by high waters caused by the storm.

CHAMPIONSHIP BATTLE TO BE PLAYED TOMORROW

Yardley and Royerstown To Play Football Contest At Norristown

EXPECT HARD CONTEST

The postponed game for the championship of the Bux-Mont Football League will be played tomorrow at the Roosevelt Stadium in Norristown at 2:15 o'clock between Yardley, winners of the lower end and Royersford, champions of the upper half.

Royersford and Yardley both have wonderful records this season, both teams suffering only a single defeat. The Royersford eleven is made up of ex-college and high school stars. At center is Shaner, a demon to all opposing teams, a good passer and a fine defensive player. At guard are Good, Boyer, Umstead and Long, the latter a 125 pound man and fast, who has been the outstanding star of their line.

Yardley will have a hard job with Royersford's tackle, Van Kannon, former Phoenixville High star, Kirk, of Spring City, Zawaski, of Pottstown High, Onyx, of Penn State, and Tiny Smith, of Swarthmore, a powerful man of 280 pounds. At ends are a sensational pair of youngsters, Rosenberger and Shirley, of Pottstown High, who are adept at catching forward passes and running punts and Mohr a very capable substitute.

The backfield consisting of Bronson, a fine line plunger and defensive player, Deihm, former Ursinus star, who has been going great all season, Reichenberger, of Bucknell, a good open field runner, who has been laid up with injuries most of the season, Ale, a heady quarterback, Prostovitch, the P. M. C. star, a ball totter hard to stop, and Punks, the wonderful fullback, a man who is tearing in all the time, easily the greatest line plugging back in the Schuylkill Valley.

The Bruins will present their strongest line-up and although their line is lighter than their opponents, they have been able to hold them all, and out of five touchdowns against Yardley four of them were intercepted passes and one around end by Cook, of Bristol.

At ends we find Logan, former Trenton High star; Lee Huddy, of Perkiomen; Woodruff, a six-footer of University of Pittsburgh, and Ed. Huddy, of Perkiomen Prep, also a four-year star at Muhlenburg, he is called to the backfield on the offensive, as Huddy is the best punter of these parts, as well as a good ball carrier and passer. Tackles are well taken care of by Duffield, former U. S. M. C. star, and Lefkowitz, U. of Miami star. Goedde, of T. H. S. fame, is used both at tackle and centre.

LATEST NEWS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9 (I.N.S.)—The criminal contempt trial of Harry F. Sinclair and William J. Burns was halted today over the week-end because of illness of George Hoover, attorney for the oil magnate, and one of the fifteen defense lawyers participating.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 9 (I.N.S.)—Leroy Lynch, 31, father of four children, was shot and wounded today when two men and a woman forced their way into his home. The trio aroused Lynch from bed, struck him over the head, then finally fled after shooting him in the right thigh. He is in a critical condition in Children's Homeopathic Hospital.

LEWISTOWN, Pa., Dec. 9 (I.N.S.)—Discovery of the shotgun of Clyde Hess, 45, Parkesburg, Pa., hunter who has been missing in this region since Tuesday, and evidence which authorities here believe pointed to foul play, today resulted in a request to State Police at Huntingdon that they make an investigation of the case.

MRS. LILLIENDAHL MAY ESCAPE PRISON SENTENCE; BEACH MAY ABSOLVE WIDOW OF BLAME

MAYS LANDING, N. J., Dec. 9 (I.N.S.)—Mrs. Margaret Lilliendahl, bobbed-haired widow of Dr. William Lilliendahl, for whose murder she was convicted, may escape a prison sentence.

It was learned on good authority today that Willis Beach, the undersized poultry farmer who was found guilty with her of voluntary manslaughter, may make a chivalrous attempt to absolve the widow of all blame in the crime.

The couple, whose love affair, the jury believed, led to the killing of Dr. Lilliendahl in a patch of woods near Hammonton on September 15, were to face Supreme Court Justice Luther A. Campbell for sentence tomorrow. The maximum sentence that can be imposed is ten years in prison and $1,000 fine. There is no minimum, hence a jail term of one day could be given.

Justice Campbell was prepared to pass sentence late yesterday when the verdict was returned by a jury which deliberated more than twenty-three hours. Robert H. McCarter, chief of defense counsel, told the court, however, that new evidence warranting a second trial had been unearthed since the jury began its deliberations, and he was given until tomorrow to prepare a brief.

This new evidence is alleged to be based on the assurance that Beach will come to the widow's rescue. He is said to be anxious to obtain for her a new trial.

The verdict of voluntary manslaughter came as a distinct blow to Mrs. Lilliendahl and Beach, both of whom expressed full confidence in an acquittal almost up to the last. They spent a restless night in their cells.

"I cannot understand how I can be punished for a thing I did not or could not have done," the widow sobbed. "I am shocked, grieved and bewildered."

Beach mumbled: "I'm not guilty; I'm not guilty."

Beach does not know that the jury which convicted him believed he did the actual shooting and that Mrs. Lilliendahl was aware of his plans and was therefore equally guilty.

The five women and seven men said they regarded the widow's frequent outbursts of tears as "theatrical" and totally disregarded the presence of her eight-year-old son, Alfred, in the court room.

One juror also said that the manslaughter verdict had been fixed as a compromise because, while the jurors felt almost from the start that Beach and Mrs. Lilliendahl were guilty of killing the doctor, some had believed that there was a doubt as to whether this had been proved legally.

ACQUIT JOSEPH GRUBB OF DRUNKEN DRIVING

Trenton Man Found Not Guilty Before Judge Ryan

BUT MUST PAY COSTS

DOYLESTOWN, Dec. 5.—A jury in the criminal court of Bucks county yesterday in Court No. 1 before Judge William C. Ryan, acquitted Joseph Grubb, of Trenton, of operating his automobile while under the influence of intoxicating liquor, but directed that he pay the costs in the case.

Grubb was arrested in Morrisville on November 20. Police of that borough described Grubb as being "very drunk" and not fit to drive an automobile. Officer Burns said that when he searched Grubb at the station house he found a small bottle of whiskey in his coat. Grubb was not examined by a doctor.

The defendant was represented by John L. DuBois, of Doylestown. The defense was that Grubb had not been drinking and that the bottle was put in his coat by a friend of his who was with him.

"You are very fortunate," said Judge Ryan to Grubb as he directed him to pay the costs in the case after the verdict had been rendered.

Harry D. Ruos, of Doylestown, was acquitted yesterday by a jury in Court No. 2 before Judge Robert A. Stoltz, of Easton, of two counts of assault and battery, but the jury directed that Ruos pay the costs in the case. The prosecutors were Howard Campbell and his wife, Mrs. Nellie D. Campbell, of Silverdale, who alleged that Ruos hit both of them on Sept. 16 when he came to their place for a cultivator that he claimed belonged to him. Ruos testified that Campbell started the argument and struck him first and that Mrs. Campbell started to beat him across the head with a switch.

Charged with aggravated assault and battery and assault and battery by automobile, William Lintz, of Philadelphia, went on trial this morning in Court No. 2 before Judge Stoltz.

FATHERS' ASSOCIATION HEARS REV. STEINMETZ

Trenton Pastor Gives Interesting Address at Meeting Here

SHOW RADIO PICTURES

Fathers' Association met last night and had a most enjoyable program in the auditorium of the high school. There was a short business session in which officers were nominated. Then there were movies showing the growth, development and value of radio. This was followed by a most excellent talk by the Rev. Samuel Steinmetz, of Trenton, N. J. At the conclusion there was a light lunch served.

Dr. Steinmetz gave an excellent address and had no difficulty in holding the attention of his audience.

The moving pictures of the radio industry were those of the Radio Corporation of America and were brought here through the courtesy of Alfred Tomesani, the local dealer. Mr. Vandervice gave an interesting lecture with the pictures, and there was a Radiola demonstrated on the stage. Four thousand feet of film was shown. Many of the men brought toys and other gifts for the girls of the Y. W. to distribute at the Christmas season.

John H. Hardy, the retiring president, gave a resume of what the Association had accomplished during his term as president.

Mr. Sales, of Frankford, introduced by Doron Green as the "daddy" of the Bristol Association, spoke briefly of the pleasure at being at the meeting.

Mrs. Walter Parr, of Woodside avenue, Edgely, will conduct a coffee social at her home on Tuesday evening, December 13th, for the benefit of the Headley Manor Fire Company. The affair will commence at 7 o'clock.

GIFTS MAY BE PURCHASED AS EASILY AT NIGHT AS DURING DAYTIME IN THE BORO'

Electricity Is Great Aid To Storekeepers and Patrons In These Days — "Gift Seeker" Says Grandma Sure Missed Something in Her Day

By "GIFT SEEKER"

IT WAS after dark when I started for the business section of Bristol last night on my second shopping trip, and I couldn't help but reflect on the fact that everything is made so easy for the shopper today. The windows are so brilliantly lighted at night and the stores so bright and gay because of the use of electricity that I felt rather sorry for our ancestors, who must have been greatly handicapped. Why, if Grandma ever attempted to shop at night-time she would have had to carry her own lantern and then I'm doubtful as to just what the results might have been.

One of the girls I have always been so chummy with was married last spring and she and her hubby have just moved into a home of their own. There seemed to be so many things I wished to buy for her new house, that this was a hard decision to reach. I finally decided upon a pair of silver candlesticks of Colonial design. I knew my two friends had no similar pieces and this is a gift I can be proud of. This purchase I made at Welling's Jewelry Store, 312 Mill street. In looking about the store I noticed some bread boards of various styles, one that attracted my attention in particular being finished in green.

Anne, my particular chum, just doted on fancy under-clothing. I do believe, and as she is quite clever with the needle the pieces she makes are really splendid. It is very hard, however, to work on a soft silk material, and I happened to notice a most pleasing chemise in the window of Smith's Model Shop—nice green, with fine trimming of light tan silk lace. The shoulder straps were very dainty and the undergarment was tastefully trimmed with tiny rosettes and ribbon of contrasting colors. Thus I found the gift for Anne. When I glimpsed a lovely pair of rayon pajamas of orange and black in the same window I could not help but wonder at the splendid assortment the Bristol merchants have.

Brother Horace, who is always out-of-doors, slidding whenever the opportunity is offered, must needs be warmly clad. His need, I decided was a pair of galoshes. These I secured at Frank Green's, and with the package safely packed under my arm with the others, I continued my search for gifts.

To please Bob, another brother, I made a trip to Adler, the clothier, and purchased a neat silk crpe scarf. This particular neckpiece, that I knew Bob would surely be delighted with, is of tan, and it has brown silk dots here and there. I was so pleased with the selection of scarfs, ties and gloves for men that I spent about ten minutes just looking over the array.

It was getting quite late, but as most of the stores were observing

ATTRACTIVE WEDDING OCCURS IN TULLYTOWN

Mr. Winfield S. Carman, of Tullytown, Weds Miss Sarah E. Hubbs

TENDERED A RECEPTION

TULLYTOWN, Dec. 9.—A very pretty and impressive wedding took place in the parsonage of the Manning Memorial M. E. Church on Wednesday evening at 8 o'clock, when Miss Sarah E. Hubbs, of South Amboy, N. J., became the bride of Mr. Winfield S. Carman, of Tullytown.

The marriage was performed by Rev. Francis J. S. Morrow, pastor of the church, and the impressive ring ceremony was used.

The bride was beautifully robed in a blue brocaded silk crepe de chine dress with pearl necklace. She wore nude colored silk stockings, black patent leather slippers with silver buckles and a handsome headpiece of rhinestones. She carried a shower bouquet of white bridal roses.

The bridesmaid was Miss Lettie E. Carman, a sister of the groom. She was attired in an attractive gown of yellow silk crepe de chine with string of pearls and rhinestone headpiece and also wore flesh colored silk stockings and black patent leather slippers. She carried a bouquet of pink roses.

Mr. Leonard C. Killian, a close friend of the groom, was the best man.

At the close of the ceremony congratulations were extended and then the bridal party entered the dining room of the parsonage where they partook of refreshments and later departed for the home of the groom, where an informal reception was given to the happy young couple.

THREE ARE CONVICTED OF STEALING SOAP FROM LOCAL PLANT OF THE MANHATTAN SOAP COMPANY, INC.

Jury Returns Verdict at Noon Today—Court Announces That Sentences Will Be Pronounced Next Week—Verdict For Bristol Police and Chief McGuckin—Plant Was Robbed on Two Different Occasions

DOYLESTOWN, Dec. 9.—Today at noon the jury returned to the Court room with a verdict of guilty against all three men implicated in the robbery of the Manhattan Soap Company's plant, Bristol. It was announced that sentence would be pronounced next week.

DOYLESTOWN, Dec. 9.—Charged with entering the plant of the Manhattan Soap Company, Inc., at Bristol on Sunday night, October 31, and stealing 44,500 cakes of "Sweetheart" toilet soap that were loaded on a motor truck, three Philadelphians went on trial yesterday before Judge William C. Ryan in Court No. 1 to answer charges of felonious entry, larceny and receiving stolen goods.

Both sides closed before adjournment yesterday afternoon. Webster Achey, of Doylestown, representing the defendants, made his address to the jury this morning, and was followed by District Attorney Arthur M. Eastburn, who prosecuted the case for the Commonwealth. This was followed by Judge Ryan's charge to the jury.

Those on trial include Otto Hoffman, of 824 North Eighth street, Philadelphia, part owner of a motor truck used for general hauling; John Ader, of 342 West Girard avenue, Philadelphia, proprietor of a shoe shining and hair cleaning establishment; and Emil Peleva, of 1218 North Fourth street, Philadelphia.

The trio was arrested by Bristol police as they were leaving the soap plant. They were found in the front seat of the truck that was loaded with the 44,500 cakes of soap that was packed in 445 cartons each containing 100 cakes.

The defense offered that Hoffman was employed by "two unknown" men to haul the soap from Bristol to Philadelphia, and that Hoffman hired Ader and Peleva for $5 apiece to assist him on the job. The trip to Bristol was led by "the two unknown men" in an automobile, the trio following in the truck. The "unknown men" escaped shortly before the police arrested the other members of the trio.

Called as the first witness for the Commonwealth, Anthony Cesarino, night watchman at the plant, testified that he saw a large "Red Bull" moving van pull up in front of the factory about 1:30 a. m. The watchman said he was in the office at the time.

"I first saw Hoffman enter the small gate leading into the yard," Cesarino continued. "He went to the loading platform, pushed open a small window and stepped inside. The main gate was broken open and I saw Peleva and Ader guiding the truck into the yard. Someone else was driving the truck in, apparently. I was inside the office, five feet away from Hoffman, when he came in the yard. The truck lights were not lighted. The truck was backed up to the loading platform. I heard a man in the warehouse and heard a portable truck that is used to haul the soap cartons, being moved about the warehouse. I called the police on the telephone from the office and then jumped out of a window and awaited outside the grounds, for the arrival of the police.

"Officers Phillips and Nichols arrived shortly. We waited ten minutes and the truck started out of the place. We then saw another automobile come from behind the truck after it had started out the factory gate. This machine passed the truck and stopped in front of it. Chief of Police McGuckin stepped from the car and stopped the truck, placing the three defendants who were in the truck, under arrest. The soap worth $2500 was in the truck. The defendants were then searched and taken to the police station."

Chief of Police John J. McGuckin was next called by the Commonwealth. He corroborated the previous witness in part. He said he stopped the truck and at the point of his gun, arrested the three youths. He said the chain and lock on the entrance gate to the place had been broken. Hoffman, the Chief said, was driving the truck when he stopped it, and Ader and Peleva were seated on the front seat with Hoffman.

Officers Charles Nichols and Ross Phillips, of the Bristol police, were called to identify the men.

The police testified that they saw another car they thought to be the car that led the truck to Bristol, parked about 500 feet away from the entrance gate. This car, police said, speeded away when the police stopped the truck.

Albert H. Gehrig, of New York, superintendent of the plant, testified that he checked up on the stolen cartons of soap and when they were replaced, they fit in the same place exactly from where they had been removed by the robbers.

At this point the Commonwealth closed its case. Attorney Achey then moved for binding instructions as to certain counts in the bill charging felonious entry and larceny. Judge Ryan refused the motion.

For the defense, Otto Hoffman was the first defendant witness called.

"Two men, unknown to me, came to my place in Philadelphia," Hoffman started out to testify. "They asked me to move some soap from Bristol for them. They told me the soap must be moved Sunday night as the road near the plant was being reconstructed and that it would be torn up after that time and the truck could not get into the plant later than that."

"I started to get busy on the job and picked up John Ader at his place of business and Ader got Emil Peleva. The men that employed me told me to meet them along the boulevard, outside of Philadelphia. When we arrived in Bristol, after being led there by the two men in another car, the two men, unknown to me, opened the gate to the plant. I was driving the truck and was guided to the platform by the two men. I called them 'the bosses' of the job. They rolled out the soap on a small truck and myself and Ader and Peleva loaded it on the truck. We started out of the place and were stopped. The lights on the truck were lighted at all times. None of us were off of the truck until it backed up to the platform."

Under cross-examination conducted by District Attorney Eastburn, Hoffman said: "I do not know the names of the men that employed me. They just told me the soap was in a Bristol factory and that I was to get $40 for the job of hauling it back to a Philadelphia warehouse. There were no lights at the plant when we got there. The 'bosses' opened the gates and I drove in. There were no lights in the factory. Something was said about the switch being broken and that is why the factory lights were not turned on."

"The bosses said they would meet us out front, after we had loaded the truck. The bosses looked like Jewish fellows to me. I was to get paid before I unloaded the truck in Philadelphia. But the two men beat it away when my truck was stopped. They went away in their own machine."

The next witness for the defense was John Ader, another defendant.

"Hoffman came to my store," Ader said, "on Sunday night, October 31. He asked me to get some help for him to haul a load of soap from Bristol to Philadelphia. He came back in the evening and stopped his truck in front of my store. I went over to a club I belong to and secured Peleva to help out. We all got on the truck and went to Bristol. I deny that I got off the truck at all until we backed up to the loading platform. I would know 'the bosses' if I saw them again."

Emil Peleva was called as the last witness for the defense. He told how Ader came to the club to get him to go along.

"I told Ader that I could not do heavy work for I had just been discharged from a hospital for a broken leg. I was informed, however, by Hoffman later that it would not be heavy work, that it was simply loading small cartons of 'Sweetheart' soap."

"Did you not hear Hoffman testify that it was simply soap that he was supposed to haul and that the bosses told him no more about the job?" asked District Attorney Eastburn.

"Well, Hoffman did say it was 'Sweetheart' soap in small cartons," answered Peleva. The defense closed at this point and Court adjourned until this morning.

TOO MUCH AIR ADVERTISING

Radio control has arrived at that stage where the Federal Radio Commission freely admits it is powerless further to reduce interference between broadcasting stations except by actual abolition of stations. That decision means, upwards of 300 stations will be ordered off the air February 1, the expiration date of their broadcasting licenses.

It is the opinion of the commission that local and national reception are now in the best condition possible with the present number of stations on the air. But reception is not yet perfect. The air is still overcrowded.

Further improvement must come by elimination of stations not rendering service corresponding to the interference they cause. First to go will be stations offering programs designed to benefit themselves and time-buyers more than the public. Since few receiving sets are tuned in on these stations, their broadcasting creates nothing but interference for stations supplying a public need.

There are too many stations sending out ninety per cent. advertising and ten per cent. entertainment and that ten per cent. of a cheap order. The air belongs to the millions of owners of receiving sets, and the purpose of radio control is to preserve the air for the listeners. Advertisers providing good radio entertainment are entitled to microphone-credit, but the announcer should make the portions of entertainment and edification larger than the portions of advertising.

Broadcasters who lose their licenses should take the misfortune in the spirit of martyrdom. For their financial loss and any other loss they may suffer let them hold nature responsible and look upon themselves as making a sacrifice in the interests of the public weal.

LURE OF THE SEA

One of the human mysteries which may never be solved is the exact origin and nature of man's idiotic passion for the sea. The sea calls and few turn a deaf ear. Some go to sea as sailors, others earn ashore their ocean passage, some get no farther than the shore, and those who never see the ocean's blue live its romance and adventure in Conrad, Stevenson and Dana.

There are more exciting sports in the contemporary world than sea travel even in a small boat; mountain climbing can be more dangerous, flying is more thrilling, and even automobile races are more dramatic. But that matters not. There is no romance in modern invention quite comparable to that curious urge to salt water which inspired the first Phoenician marine enterprise, which sent forth the Norsemen and Spanish and English explorers across unknown seas to even more mysterious lands, which once filled the high seas with privateers, traders and fishermen, and which now attracts millions to ocean liners and seashore resorts.

Romance is the eternal and universal appeal for which humanity has ever turned to the sea. Who will say whether romance owes its appeal to the sea or that the sea derives its interest from its association with romance?

The attraction at the seashore resort is the sea rather than the resort; the lure of the sea novel is the romance of the sea rather than the story. It is a queer, an ancient, and an inexplicable enchantment and once the "ole devil" has you escape is impossible.

School Sponges

Webster says sponges come from the sea. That may be true in part, but not all sponges come from the sea. There are too many that have never seen the ocean.

There are sponges and sponges. Despite the great number of varieties sponges are all alike in principle. To get the most for the least is their motto, and they keep it well.

Do you know a sponge? It is certainly tain you do. At school there is the person who always wants you to prepare his lesson for him. He is forever asking for your arithmetic paper, or your English exercise.

When you see the sponge coming down the hall, you run the other way. But he is a good sprinter; he catches you two minutes later just as you have begun to congratulate yourself on your escape. He approaches with a serene air and "smiling morning face."

He knows he is "a nuisance"—this plaintively, as if to say you know he cannot help it—but "could you just this once?"

Without waiting for him to finish, you frantically thrust upon him all your papers and mumble an excuse over your shoulder as you hurry away.

The fellow is positively uncanny. You have left off hating him out of fear—pure fear. He has a way of finding you every time he needs you. Before each approach you determine not to give in, but you always weaken.

But to go back to Webster's sponge—a sponge never achieves anything in life. Once a sponge, always a sponge; it makes no difference in what condition or state of life the creature exists.

Perfect attendance in November—Second Grade:

Margaret Brenner, Thelma Courtney, Evelyn Ganther, Dorothy Keates, Martha Laucher, Esther Mutch, Ruth Mutch, Ruth Wyche, Harold Cassile, Edward English.

Tullytown Church Notes

TULLYTOWN, Dec. 9.—A very interesting meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Manning Memorial M. E. Church was held on Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. Elsie Walter, corner of Brown street and Fallington avenue. At the close of the business session all repaired to the dining room and greatly enjoyed a fine sauer kraut supper prepared by the genial hostess.

The regular monthly business meeting of the official board of the Manning Memorial M. E. Church was held in the parsonage on Tuesday evening and this was followed by the weekly rehearsal of the combined orchestra and choir. This was the first rehearsal of the Christmas music. During the interim of both meetings refreshments were served, which were greatly enjoyed by all present.

SYNOPSIS

Fabien, good and handsome youth of France, trains for the priesthood; but meets and loves Manon Lescaut, beautiful orphan, whose rascally brother, realizing her worldly value, barter her to Ravoit, rich connoisseur of women. Fabien saves her and carries her off to Paris, where they live happily together. Manon's brother steals her for Ravoit. Circumstances force her to surrender to Ravoit. Fabien, thinking her perfidious, returns to his studies. On the eve of his ordination Manon confronts him and pleads for his love.

CHAPTER XIV—Continued

"Manon, can you promise that you would never leave me again?" Fabien searched her eyes.

"Leaving—I know—I swear it!" her eyes answered his.

The agitation and tumult that her nearness kindled in Fabien thrilled him with a kind of horror that made him experience the vague sense of being carried into a new existence.

That is exactly what was happening and it came about with such power that he could no longer resist the call. As Manon's fragrant nearness broke down his last spark of resistance, Fabien gathered her hungrily into his starved arms and strained her to him in a strong passionate embrace. His lips found hers and held them for a wonderful moment of complete forgetfulness.

The reunited lovers were called from themselves by the chiming bells in the great Cathedral tower. "My dear, do you hear?" questioned Fabien happily. "Their ringing means my freedom, and yours!" He gathered Manon to him again for a brief ecstatic embrace, then removed his cassock and left it on the ground—the only part of him that was to remain within the narrow confines of the altar walls.

To be together was all they asked, and since holding Manon in his arms Fabien had not had a moment's doubt about the wisdom of again relinquishing his vows for her.

They agreed that their present and future happiness was secure beyond the reach of Fate or the interference of man; and so with one arm about Manon's slim shoulders Fabien led her out into the world.

Where? They neither knew nor cared. Just what awaited them did not matter so long as they had each other.

CHAPTER XV

Love with all its resulting pleasures is a wonderful thing, but unfortunately cannot be enjoyed for very long without enough money to insure food and shelter.

Fabien's hasty and unpremeditated departure from St. Sulpice did not leave time to think of money, and when he wanted to return for his purse Manon would not consider it. She feared complications and dreaded the thought of losing him again even for a moment. Anyway, the content of the purse would not have lasted long, for Fabien demanded nothing in the way of worldly goods while at St. Sulpice, and naturally his finances were never large. Now, however, money was as essential to their future as the food their bodies required.

Manon had salvaged enough from the odious but profitable days with the Comte De Ravoit to take care of them for some time. Of course she offered it immediately as a solution to their problem and was surprised when Fabien rebelled at the abhorrent idea.

It took only a little explaining on Fabien's part to make her understand why they could not exist on the Comte's past generosity. Manon acceded to his wishes very graciously; in fact, nothing mattered now that they were together with the past all explained and buried away. She assigned herself unreservedly to Fabien's care and instinctively knew that in some way he would provide everything her heart desired.

Fabien was even more sure of this than Manon. He had lost her once because he was so absorbed in dreams of love that he ignored the material. Now he planned to provide for her even more lavishly than had the Comte, so that no odious comparison would ever make Manon unhappy or cause him to fall in her estimation as a man and provider.

The only means at hand was for Fabien to draw on his father and he did it with a heavy hand because he knew that after his parent had been notified a second call for funds would be refused.

To satisfy Manon's love for pleasure it seemed important that they should reside in Paris. She found a beautiful place that she wanted, consequently Fabien took it and they established themselves in gorgeous style with utter disregard for expense; nor did they take time from love making to think where more money would come from when their dwindling supply was exhausted.

They were enjoying a dream, and money never matters in dreams; so why should they worry? Besides, all dreams end soon enough. It is stupid to attempt control; just give yourself up completely to the temporary oblivion and make the best of the rude awakening.

The flying weeks added a new radiance to love. Manon grew so sweet in her unceasing attentions to Fabien that he felt fully rewarded for his past troubles and changed plans. Her passion for jewelry and beautiful gowns went hand in hand with her love for amusement and she soon discovered that Fabien gratified every whim.

Smart new friends became frequent visitors at the Des Greux household. It happened that many of the same people who witnessed the dramatic scene between Fabien and Manon at the Gambling Club, annexed themselves to the host of friends and admirers. Strangely enough, one of the most faithful from this group was Nana. It may have been because she found Manon's salon the best place in Paris to meet interesting men, but we will give her credit for a flare of real friendship and add for good measure that she no longer treasured a grudge against Fabien—instead she openly admired him and would have given her soul to hold the place in his affections that Manon occupied. She openly and secretly, when occasion permitted, angled for his attention and her efforts were so untiring that Fabien often had to make excuses to get away from her.

Manon's boudoir was lovely beyond compare. Panelled walls of soft rose colored satin matched the exquisite hangings. All of her toilet articles were of crystal and gold, a gift from Fabien that made her lavish caresses on him for a whole hour. Abundant payment.

The bed was charming, but not more so than its occupant as the brightness from the mid-day sun filtered through the windows and shone brightly upon Manon as she sat there, basking with silken pillows, enjoying her breakfast chocolate, while Fabien, who had been up for hours, came in to watch her.

"Your hair is so soft and lovely," said Fabien, tenderly patting the mass of golden ringlets spread out on the pillows around her head. "I like you much better this way than in a formal wig. It reminds me of our first night in the attic room when I saw you asleep."

Fabien buried his face in Manon's curls and as her sweetness took possession of his senses he kissed her—many times—while she pillowed his head upon her breast and bowed her head in adorable submission.

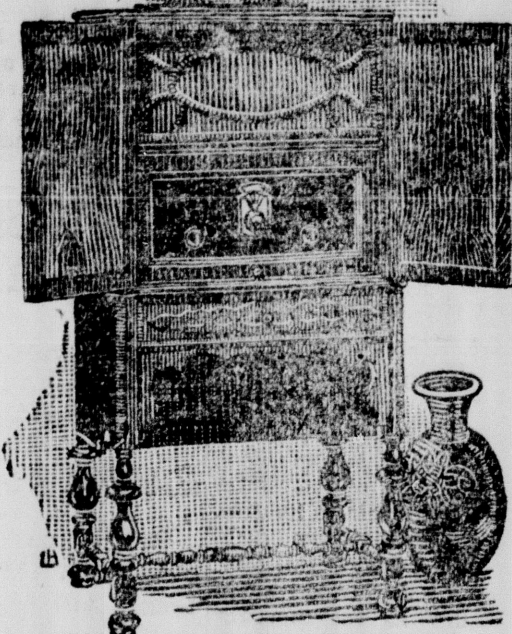

A knock at the door warned them that it was time for Manon's day to begin. Late night hours made it advisable for her to remain abed until noon and Fabien always came in to wake her and remain until the maid arrived to draw her bath.

By the time the door opened, Fabien was way out in the middle of the room talking casually with Manon as she, just as casually, finished her chocolate. It was a little game of hoax they always enjoyed. Although it concealed nothing for the simple reason that the maid was—Marie—the wise gossip loving slave from the pension. It had been another whim of Manon's to engage her as personal maid and costume her in all the neatness of a pretty uniform. Marie arose to the occasion grandly and watched over her adored mistress as jealously as a devoted watch dog. The new surroundings also gave her hungry soul a feast and she found the large servants' hall an amazing place for scandal.

"Messieurs the Abbe Martineau and the Duke D'Esfont—Mademoiselle Nana—and the hairdressers are waiting to see Madam." Marie made her announcement very stiffly, while now and then she cast a grim look at Fabien. Now she did not like him because she was forced to change her opinion about his appearance and his wealth.

RED CROSS DRIVE IS 25 PER CENT SHORT OF QUOTA

The closing weeks of the annual Red Cross membership enrollment find Philadelphia and the four surrounding counties, twenty-five per cent short of the quota of 175,000 members asked of this territory by the National Headquarters at Washington. The number was assigned to the Southeastern Pennsylvania Chapter after President Coolidge, in his capacity as national head of the American Red Cross, asked the country for five million members as the minimum needed to keep this great organization prepared at all times to answer emergency calls immediately.

"It is impossible for the Red Cross to reach the entire territory, even with its large force of volunteer canvassers," said Colonel J. Franklin McFadden, the chapter chairman, in a recent statement. "If you have not yet been asked to join, you will not send in your names, addresses, and dues for 1928, without waiting to be approached? The chapter headquarters at 1610 Locust street, Philadelphia, will receive them, and checks should be made to the order of the American Red Cross. Do it today."

"The number of members assigned must be obtained, if the local Red Cross is to render Washington the support which makes possible such instant relief as was given suffering people at the time of the Mississippi flood and the recent flood in Vermont."

Incomplete reports received by chapter officials showed a marked increase in memberships in territories which already have reported total enrollments. The Main Line branch of which Mrs. Alexander Brown is chairman, reported a total enrollment of 12,000 members—a gain of 33 and one-third per cent. over last year's figures. In the city wards in Philadelphia for which the chairman is Mrs. Henry B. Cox, the largest returns have been received in the Chestnut Hill district where eleven thousand members have been signed up through the efforts of Mrs. Alfred S. Well.

The largest membership enrollment reported by any single establishment thus far was turned in by employees of the Pennsylvania Railroad at Broad Street Station who signed up 2,117 strong.

Prisoners of the Eastern Penitentiary sent $32.10 which the men collected among themselves as an expression of their feeling toward the Red Cross.

One of the most interesting of the many 100 per cent enrollments came from the members of the Philadelphia Orchestra which is composed of musicians of fifteen different nationalities. There are 168 men in the organization, which in the absence of Leopold Stokowski, is under the temporary leadership of Fritz Reiner. Nearly a third of the men served on different fronts in the World War, and are veterans of the American Army and Navy, and the French, Italian, Russian, Austrian and German armies.

For the first time in ten years, the Orchestra Association abrogated the rule barring speakers, and Colonel McFadden was permitted to address the men in an interval of rehearsal, and present his appeal for the Red Cross.

He youngest member of the Southeastern Pennsylvania Chapter is Miss Corinne D. Ellis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Maurice J. Ellis, 5405 Gaynor Road, who had the distinction of being enrolled when she was just twenty-seven hours old. The membership blank was turned in by her father to the Tradesmen's National Bank, 431 Chestnut street.

More than 7,000 volunteers have assisted the Red Cross to sign up members for 1928, and many are continuing their work until the territory assigned them is covered.

Gifts May Be Purchased As Easily At Night As During Daytime In The Boro'

(Continued from Page One) later hours, owing to the holiday season, I decided I would take advantage of the clerks' good nature, and occupy some more of their time. Therefore I rented my way to A. Popkin's shoe store, where I had previously seen some silk hosiery that attracted my eye. The pair I bought for Marie is of mauve color, and has a neat pointed head.

No Christmas is complete without a tree in my estimation, and as mother had asked me to attend to some purchases of things to enhance our tree, I paid a visit to Harry Straus' store. Here I replenished our stock of reflectors, tinsel and garlands. I had previously decided that each night as I arrived home I would wrap my gifts, so I likewise attended to the buying of cord, seals and other necessary articles for the entire family. My, but I'm getting on marvelously.

Uncle Jim who always carries his lunch to work with him just must have his cup of hot coffee. He has been in the habit of buying it at a nearby restaurant, but that means that he must take a cold walk during the nasty weather. So I decided the thing he needed most was a vacuum bottle. I found just what I had in mind at Green's Army and Navy Store, Mill street. The bottle will hold a pint of liquid, and it is fitted in a neat black box, which will hold his lunch.

The thing in which I'm most interested any day of the year is candy, having acquired several sweet teeth since my babyhood days. Everytime I pass the window of the Bristol Confectionery Company I just stop and gaze and then finally pass through the entrance. So I passed through the door of this candy kitchen yesterday and made Christmas purchases that will last for many a day. There was hard candy of every flavor, chocolate covered nuts and fruits, candy canes, and novelties. I found some lovely five-pound boxes of mixed chocolates and immediately ordered two. The chocolate is so tasty, and can be had in either the milk chocolate or the dark.

My arms were full and so was my mouth of candy, and finally deciding that if I didn't reach home soon our supply of Christmas sweets would be depleted, I made up my mind to go immediately and preserve the family sweets.

Needlework Guild Holds Annual Session

(Continued from Page One) pairs trousers, 57 underdrawers, 246 undershirts, 63 underwaists, 249 union suits, 132 wash-cloths, 73 wrappers.

Of the large quantity reported yesterday it was stated that 174 were for men, 759 for boys, 507 for women, 1,610 for girls, 970 for infants, and 594 of the articles were for household use.

As election of officers takes place every two years the present incumbents have one more year to serve. Committee chairmen appointed by the president, Mrs. Ancker, at yesterday's session, were:

Mrs. C. L. Anderson, ramage sales; Mrs. Fred Kring and Mrs. Edgar Opdyke, sewing committee; Mrs. Harry Pope, card parties; Mrs. Edward Renk, prize committee; Mrs. Archibald Morris and Mrs. N. D. Bertollette, cake sale committee.

Refreshments of doughnuts and coffee were served at the conclusion of the meeting.

Mrs. Ancker spoke briefly of the work which had been accomplished and expressed her satisfaction of the results.

OLD DITCH DIGGER GIVES THE SECRET OF HUMAN HAPPINESS

How he found an answer to the ancient question as to what brings supreme and lasting happiness from an old ditch-digger is told by Booth Tarkington in an article, "What You Want in Life," published in the forthcoming January issues of "The Red Book Magazine." Citing his observations of men who had amassed wealth, Mr. Tarkington declares material opulence always fails to satisfy and bring content, and that plutocrats worth millions are as restless as anybody else. Nor do human relationships, a happy home and family life, bring peace of soul. Subject to change and separation, the most perfect relationships are bound sooner or later to bring distress. None of the ordinary happinesses which people obtain can last, since everything continually changes. What, then, is the supreme feeling that all the world seeks? What is the secret of true happiness?

"We all do want something; we all do seek something, even though we do not know what we seek," writes Mr. Tarkington. "Some of us think it is a strip of pasture, or an addition to the house, or a new automobile. But if we got these things we wouldn't stop seeking. We are always mistaken in thinking that what we want (in the long run) is anything material."

"Before Christmas the child believes that the new sled and skates to be found upon the brilliant tree will bring him permanent happiness; but in a little while he has begun to look forward to the Fourth of July, ever seeking happiness ahead. The man whose salary is eighteen hundred a year may think that what he wants in life is ten thousand a year; but he still seeks something else, even if he becomes the richest man in the world. Our plutocrats with five millions a year may not care for more money; but they are as restless as anybody. There are no plateaus where one rests content with life because of material opulence."

"I had to conclude that not only do we fail to obtain what we want in life if we think we want material things, since the things (if we do succeed in getting them) never satisfy us for long; but we also fail to obtain enough of the feeling we seek if that feeling depends on material things. That is to say, we must (of our natures and because of our destiny) seek to obtain a feeling, and yet the feeling that most of us strive to obtain is unobtainable, because it depends upon material things. This appears to be a law; and its wisdom is easily apparent, since if we could get what we want we should cease to progress. Nevertheless, there seems to be a kind of folly in us and a denial that we are thinking begins if we perpetually set our hearts upon getting a feeling that we can't get."

"Then, with this humanity rather discouraging thought in mind, I began to wonder if there could be any permanently satisfactory feeling that we could get. In other words, what we want in life is inevitably a feeling. What, then, is the best feeling we can get?"

"I could not find the answer by theorizing, or by what we sometimes call 'philosophizing' about it; the question concerned people, and so I had to think of people: I had to look for a solution from them. Therefore I took it up with two of the best of them that I know. I went to old Mr. Gregory, the retired minister, who lives on the hill over the village. He is a man of whom it is said, 'He never did a wrong thing in his life'; and I thought he might shed a light. I asked him if the feeling we should want in life is the feeling that we have always done the right thing."

"No man is entitled to such a feeling," he said. "It can't be attained. What one generation believes right another generation believes wrong. Adam and Eve knew right from wrong after eating the apple; but that seems to be the last time anybody ever had the knowledge."

"So I turned to Miss Gilly, who came to our village to spend her old age after a lifetime of work in the slums of cities, helping stricken poor people. 'Is the feeling we want in life one that comes from service to our fellow-beings?' I asked."

"I haven't got it," she said. "I'm still distressed by the fact that there always was, and continues to be, infinitely more misery than such workers as I could hope to relieve. Only when there is no more misery in the world could I have what I want in life."

"So I perceived that the answer lay neither with Mr. Gregory nor Miss Gilly. I was discouraged, naturally, for if the two best people in all the village couldn't help me, who could? Then, one day, as I walked along the muddy road that runs across Frog Marsh, I heard a cracked voice singing, and, tracing the sound, I found old Willie Silver digging and singing in a ditch. Willie isn't a native; I think he is remotely of Portuguese extraction, though he wandered down our way from Canada in his youth and has been a laborer on odd jobs about the village ever since.

"He paused in his work when he saw me looking down upon him; then with the brown back of his right hand he swept a lock of white hair from before one eye and finished the movement with a gesture of greeting. 'How do,' he said heartily, and laughed."

"You're cheerful today," I said. "Me? he returned. 'I'm cheerful any other day, too. This is a fine day, though. Very fine day.'"

"I doubt if I should think so, Willie, if I had to do what you're doing. I'd think it a pretty burdensome day if I had to swing shovelfuls of that heavy wet mud up over my shoulder hour after hour."

"Mud?" he said, and he laughed again. "That's nice mud."

"Nice mud? What are you talking about?"

"Mud," Willie said. "Mud. Same as you or me."

"What?"

"Yes," he insisted. "You and me and mud, we're all the same. Came out of mud. Got to go back into it some day, too. Well, that's no difference."

"You mean it won't make any difference to us when we're buried in the earth?"

"Sure it won't," he said gayly. "Not to me. You and me, we're all the same as mud now, anyway, before we're buried. Look there!" He jerked his brown shovel upward, pointing with it to where a daylight moon, lovely in a sunny blue sky, waited for night like a patient actress in the wings long before her entrance cue. "Moon, too," Willie said. "Mud, moon, sun, stars and you and me—it's all the same. All one business, all one same thing."

"I was interested, and, peering down upon his cheerful upturned face, I asked: 'What's the best feeling in the world, Willie?'

"How?"

"I'm looking for a feeling that would be the best feeling a man can get from within himself, no matter what his circumstances or even his disposition; and it must be one that he can have, not for just a little while, but for every moment of his whole life. What do you think such a feeling would be?"

"I dunno. Rich man, I guess he got a good feeling. Young man that walk with his girl, I guess he got a good feeling. Me, I got a good feeling no matter what I do. Shovel mud, I

CLINICS AID MANY PERSONS IN STATE

One of the important pieces of work made possible through the sale of Christmas Seals by the Pennsylvania Tuberculosis Society and its affiliated organizations throughout Pennsylvania is the medical service.

This service includes clinics, which give health examinations, and medical lectures and demonstrations before medical societies, nurses and other groups. In the clinics emphasis is laid on chest examinations. The clinics are conducted by the medical director of the Pennsylvania Tuberculosis Society in co-operation with physicians in the communities where they are held.

In the first ten months of 1927 these clinics showed the following records:

88 clinics held.
3,746 persons examined.
11,577 diseases and defects discovered.
5.1 average number of defects per person.
273 persons, or 7.3 per cent, were found with indications of tuberculosis.

According to Dr. W. P. Brown, medical director of the Pennsylvania Tuberculosis Society, there has already been reported a large number of corrections and early treatment of diseases as a result of the clinics.

During the year medical societies were addressed in these counties:

SUPPORT SEAL SALE

Colonel Henry W. Shoemaker is Chairman and Governor Fisher Honorary Chairman of the Christmas Seal Committee for Pennsylvania. The other members of this Committee for the twentieth annual Christmas Seal sale comprise several scores of prominent and active men and women from all sections of the State.

The members beside the chairman include the following:

Mrs. Edward W. Biddle, Carlisle.
Rev. Dr. E. P. Platteicher, Reading.
Rev. John W. Long, Williamsport.
Miss Frances Derrance, Kingston.
Dr. M. G. Brumbaugh, Huntingdon.
Hon. James H. Maurer, Reading.
Dr. John A. H. Keith, Indiana.
Mrs. Clifford Pinciot, Millard.
Thomas J. Baldrige, Hollidaysburg.
Mrs. E. A. Weiner, Lebanon.
Dr. Ralph D. Hartzel, State College.
Bishop Hugh Boyle, Pittsburgh.
Mrs. John A. Frick, Allentown.
Dr. Theodore B. Appel, Lancaster.
Dr. H. H. Shenk, Annapolis.
E. J. Stackpole, Dr. George P. Donohoe, Col. one Edward Martin, Bishop James H. Darling ton, Harrisburg.
George H. Lorimer, Bishop Thomas J. Garland, O. H. Helms, Justice Robert von Mosch zler, Agnew T. Dice, Philadelphia.

The Seal With the Double-Barred Cross

If you could know
That the pennies
That you spend
For Christmas seals
Might chance to be
The very pennies
That would surely bring
To some little child

The health that otherwise
It might not know,
Would you not spend,
More and more
such pennies?

Would you not forego
Some lesser pleasure even If you knew
You could do that?
Or it might chance
That yours might be
The pennies to restore
A stricken mother
To her stricken brood.
Or to bring a broken father
Back to earning power.
Would you not spend more pennies?
The more the pennies
That you spend
The more the good
The pennies do.
Then buy the Christmas seals—
Health Seals.

Christmas Seal Your Mail

Though well I feel
I'll feel still better
With a Christmas seal
Upon each letter.

TUBERCULOSIS DAY

In connection with the Christmas Seal sale tuberculosis day in the schools will be observed on Friday, December 9th. Children will be told how to avoid tuberculosis and will hear the glad story of Santa and his Christmas Seal.

Fighting Tuberculosis Is Everybody's Business

Old Ditch Digger Gives The Secret of Human Happiness

got a good feeling. I like mud because mud and me all the same business. Tonight I look up at that moon when she's bright. Yes, you're a fine shiny moon, I'll say. All the same business as me and mud, I'll say."

"Do you mean you have the feeling that you are part of everything, Willie?"

"I guess so." His face became serious for a moment. "I tell you I'm religious, a very religious man. You remember when my boy die, 'tree years ago? Yes; he's the only child I got. Well, that's all right whether he live or die. Him and me, we're all the same as mud and moon and sun and stars. Always been the same, always will be. I'm a very religious man, y' understand. I like to eat a cabbage, or dig a mud ditch, whatever you want. It's nice mud; I like it. Same thing as me."

"Willie, what do you want in life?"

"He laughed. 'Me? I'm all right.'"

"Then, as I went on, I heard him singing again, and the flying mud from his shovel splashed merrily on the bank above him. It was a strange thing, I thought, to hear a white-haired old man singing happily at the heavy, dirty labor that earned his daily bread. He was seventy-two and would not long be able to dig ditches and pile stones; he would go to the Poor Farm then. Would he sing at the Poor Farm? Probably he would. Probably he would say that the Poor Farm, like mud, was the same thing that he was."

"He had found that he was a part of the whole, it seemed. He had the feeling that he was one with the universe; that is, he knew he was of the Universal Design and of the Designer. The universe, he perceived, was immortal; therefore every part of it was immortal, and he and his dead son were immortal. There was no death, there was only change. He and every other part were 'the same thing,' altering in shape but not in substance. Therefore he loved his neighbor as himself; for his neighbor was himself, whether his neighbor was the moon or a passer-by, like me, or even just the mud he worked in."

"No wonder he could sing as he worked in it! He had the best that any man and every man may want in life and get and keep; and here, after all, to my old, old question was the old, old answer—singing in a ditch in the Frog Marsh."

"Yes, all is change; but nothing is death. We speak of the 'solid rock' under our feet' as if the rock always had been and always would be 'solid rock'; yet any school course in geology teaches that the rock was once gas and will some day be gas again, when enough heat reaches it. Nevertheless, the rock, as part of the universe, is everlasting, and so is a man."

"But the rock cannot consciously have the feeling that Willie Silver had in his heart. The rock cannot consciously say, 'I am a part of the whole, and, as the whole must be everlasting, so must I be.' For that reason the rock is not haunted by the fear known to human beings when they say, 'Ah, yes; but shall I know that I am everlasting when the death change has dispersed my body into dust? Shall I still know then that I exist?"

"What part of us is it that asks this question? Evidently it is a part that the rock does not have. And this questioning part—this part that says 'I—mustn't it, too, be everlasting, since the whole is everlasting?"

"I do not think that Willie Silver troubles his head much with that common fear of ours. He knows that he will live forever, and yet he does not look for rewards, or punishments, either, in a 'life after death.' It seems to me that he shovels mud as gayly as he would wear a golden crown; he would not care for a crown as a reward for his shoveling. He knows that if his back aches, the pain is temporary, since all things continually change, while he himself, though he changes too, is immortal."

"And so, thinking over Willie Silver and my old bachelor friend and all the rest of us, I came to the conclusion that when most of us get what we think we want in life, we get nothing comparable to what Willie Silver has. What seems strange about this is that all the rest of us could have what Willie has if we could only realize that it's what we want. For the very act of realization will give it to us."

A Christmas Gift should be a Remembrance

A gift, which, because of its everlasting presence, its beauty or its usefulness, is a constant and happy reminder of both the giver and the occasion.

Nothing more fully meets these requirements than a Radiola. A Radiola will last a lifetime—it will never grow old.

Though Radiolas are built with thousandth-of-an-inch preciseness, they are built so sturdily and sealed so well that years cannot affect their delicate adjustments.

Give a Radiola for Christmas and your gift will remain throughout the years—a joy for one, and for many—a living remembrance from you.

WALSH THINKS A. A. U. SHOULD BE ATTACKED

By Davis J. Walsh
I. N. S. Sports Editor

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—Reports that the United States Golf Association would "look into" the matter of that recent presentation of a $50,000 home in Atlanta to Bobby Jones were denied with vigor today by Herbert H. Ramsey, official mouthpiece of the Association. The reports had their inception in a story printed locally, purporting to have inside information to the effect that British authorities were inclined to frown upon the present because it smacked of commercialism and that the American authorities, in self-defense, might be forced to make an investigation of the circumstances.

Nothing could be further from the truth, according to Mr. Ramsey's statement to the writer. He said that he, personally, and so far as he knew other officials of the Association as well were perfectly satisfied that the gift house fell well within the bounds of amateur ethics. Incidentally, he expressed surprise that anyone could have obtained an official expression of opinion from abroad or that the English authorities had been represented as having interested themselves in the case.

"I am satisfied, from our mutual experience, that England is content to reserve its own amateur ethics and to allow us to take care of our own," he declared. "Matters of this kind always have been settled to our mutual satisfaction without interference from the country not concerned. As to that, the Golf Association itself is not concerned, so far as I know, and neither can I say that I think there is anything to be settled."

The understanding the writer received about the $50,000 gift is that some of Jones' friends in Atlanta, of which he is believed to have a few got together one fine morning and decided that their admiration of the young man had gone far enough without some evidence of intrinsic appreciation. This appears to have been Mr. Ramsey's understanding, too.

Second Link of Air Mail Line Opens December 17th

By International News Service
CLEVELAND, O., Dec. 9.—The first link of the second air mail, passenger and express route hooking up Cleveland with the Eastern seaboard—the Cleveland and Buffalo leg of the projected Cleveland-Boston route—will go into operation December 17.

This was the announcement made by Major John Berry, superintendent of the Brook Park airport, following a conference with E. M. Rarney, manager of operation for the Colonial Western Airways of New York, contractors for the new line.

Indications are that only the Cleveland-Buffalo leg of the line will be operated during the coming winter. The rest of the line, already under contract, is between Cleveland and Albany, will be started in the spring as soon as the air ports at Rochester and Albany are ready for service.

One plane daily will be operated in both directions of the Cleveland-Buffalo line, although night service will not be started until the entire route goes into operation in the spring. The Buffalo plane will leave Cleveland at 12:15 p. m. and the Cleveland-bound plane will arrive here at 4:30 p. m. connecting with the east and west
